The purpose of this book series is to publish high quality volumes on the history of law and justice.

Legal history can be a deeply provocative and influential field, as illustrated by the growth of the European universities and the ius commune, the French Revolution, the American Revolution, and indeed all the great movements for national liberation through law. The study of history gives scholars and reformers the models and courage to question entrenched injustices, by demonstrating the contingency of law and other social arrangements.

Yet legal history today finds itself diminished in the universities and legal academy. Too often scholarship betrays no knowledge of what went before, or why legal institutions took the shape they did. This series seeks to remedy that deficiency.

Studies in the History of Law and Justice will be theoretical and reflective. Volumes will address the history of law and justice from a critical and comparative viewpoint. The studies in this series will be strong bold narratives of the development of law and justice. Some will be suitable for a very broad readership.

Contributions to this series will come from scholars on every continent and in every legal system. Volumes will promote international comparisons and dialogue. The purpose will be to provide the next generation of lawyers with the models and narratives needed to understand and improve the law and justice of their own era.

The series includes monographs focusing on a specific topic, as well as collections of articles covering a theme or collections of article by one author.

This volume reports on the first research results of the ERC Advanced Grant ReConFort, Reconsidering Constitutional Formation. The transdisciplinary project deals with selected constitutional discourses in eighteenth and nineteenth century Europe and focuses on the experimental ambiguity or indetermination of constitutional texts with regard to state-organisational core elements. At the invitation of the University of Macerata from 9 to 11 March 2015, the post docs and myself as principal investigator presented the research results on national sovereignty. The essays of this volume rely on the elaborated version of the papers given in Macerata. This book wouldn't have come into existence without the help of many I express my warmest thanks here. I am particularly grateful to Luigi Lacché (Macerata) who invited us for the spring conference 2015; to Brecht Deseure (Brussels), Giuseppe Mecca (Macerata) and Anna Tarnowska (Torún) for their excellent commitment to the project, to Shavana Musa (Manchester) for her native speaker's correction of my texts and to the doctoral students (Franziska Meyer, Passau; Joachim Kummer, Berlin) for their support with sources and literature. My thanks also go to the organisational masterminds of ReConFort Stefan Schmuck (Passau) and Elisabeth Schneider (secretary at my chair) who gave much of their time to bring my ideas into life.
