Students must provide these main points:

English as a Native Language (ENL) (1 mark) is the variety of the English language spoken by people who acquired English as their first language or mother tongue. Native Englishes include American English, Australian English, British English, Canadian English, Irish English, New Zealand English, Scottish English...

English as a Lingua Franca (ELF) refers to the teaching, learning, and use of English as a common means of communication (or contact language) between two or more people who do not have the same first language. E.g: speakers of different countries: mainland Europe, China, and Brazil

English as a Foreign Language (ELF) (1 mark) refers to the study of English by non-native speakers in countries where English is not the dominant language. It is used by non-native speakers to communicate with native speakers

2 marks for examples from each bullet point above

Câu 2 (5 điểm):

Students' answers may vary.

Students must include these main points

The history of English is divided into three periods usually called Old English, Middle English, and Modern English.

- The period of Old English: About AD 450, when Britain was largely inhabited by Celtic peoples – the last Roman legions having left some 40 years earlier. The invaders, who probably came from Northern Germany and Denmark, represented three main tribes of people known as Angles, Saxons and Jutes. These settlers were later referred to as Anglo-Saxons, and their language, although not documented substantially until about 300 years later, constitutes the roots of English.
- The period of Middle English extends roughly from 1100-1500. The influence of French (and Latin, often by way of French) upon the lexicon continued throughout this period, the loss of some inflections and the reduction of others accelerated, and many changes took place within the phonological and grammatical systems of the language.
- The period of Modern English extends from the 1500 to our own day. The early part of this period saw the completion of a revolution in the phonology of English that had begun in late Middle English and that effectively redistributed the occurrence of the vowel phonemes to something approximating their present pattern.
